

Enjoying what one does can be contagious We currently offer four weekly classes. "All of our students are working on different projects at different levels, usually on more than one piece at a time".

Classes are ongoing, running continuously year round in a casual, relaxing atmosphere, and open to anyone who would like to attend. There are four weekly classes, so space is not usually a problem. The average number of students per class is between eight and twelve. All are carving at different levels and on different projects. Jeff receives positive feedback using this format and has always said that anyone can learn from someone else, regardless of individual level, age or background.
